Importation of Experimental Organisms: The Administering Organisation must ensure that, before experimental organisms are imported into Australia for the purposes of research to be undertaken by the Initiative, the Administering Organisation or the Program Leader must obtain agreement in principle for the importation from the appropriate Commonwealth and State authorities.

C2. Research Involving Humans or Animals: If any Initiative conducted by the Administering Organisation involves research on or involving humans or other animals, the Administering Organisation must ensure that the codes adopted for these purposes by the National Health and Medical Research Council are complied with and that the project may not commence without clearance from the Administering Organisation’s Ethics or Biosafety Committee (or equivalent) and from any other relevant authority.

C3. Deposition of Biological Materials: Any biological material accumulated during the course of the Initiative shall be transferred to an Australian body with statutory responsibility for control of such material. If no such body is available to take control of the biological material then the Administering Organisation shall dispose of the material in accordance with the Administering Organisation’s established safeguards.

C4. Genetically Modified Organisms: If the Initiative involves the use of gene technology (i.e. any technique for the modification of genes or other genetic material either in vitro or on live organisms) or the use of a genetically modified organism (i.e. an organism that has been modified by gene technology or that has inherited particular traits from an organism that were present because of gene technology) which is registered under the Gene Technology Act 2000, then before the proposed research commences, the Administering Organisation must retain all certificates relating to the above and provide evidence to the Scheme Coordinator if required to do so. The Administering Organisation must be accredited with the Office of the Gene Technology Regulator.

C5. Ionising Radiation: If the Initiative involves the use of ionising radiation, the Administering Organisation will ensure that any personnel performing procedures involving ionising radiation are appropriately trained and hold a relevant current licence from the appropriate State authority. The Administering Organisation must retain all such licences and provide them to the Scheme Coordinator if required to do so.

C6. Social Science Data Sets: Any machine-readable data arising from the Initiative involving research relating to the social sciences should be lodged with the Australian Consortium for Social and Political Research Inc. (ACSPRI) or any other appropriate archive for secondary use by other investigators. This should normally be done within two years of the conclusion of any fieldwork relating to the research. If a Chief Investigator is not intending to do so within the two-year period, s/he must inform the Commonwealth in writing before the expiry of the two-year period.
